“New Style” Employment and Support Allowance Factsheet

August 2019

Employment and Support Allowance (ESA) is a benefit paid to people whose ability to work is limited either by ill health or disability. To qualify you must be under state pension age and no longer have any entitlement to Statutory Sick Pay. Before the introduction of Universal Credit, ESA had two elements: contributory ESA and income-related ESA. Under the universal credit system, ESA has just one element, corresponding to contributory ESA: “new style” ESA. This benefit is linked to your national insurance contribution record. To be entitled, you must have paid national insurance contributions over a certain number of years. “New Style” ESA is not affected by savings or most other income, except for occupational or personal pensions. You can continue to receive personal independence payments and industrial injuries disablement benefit. However “New Style” ESA is taxable.

Special Rules

With a diagnosis of a terminal illness, such as mesothelioma, your claim can be dealt with under Department for Work and Pensions (DWP) “special rules” and your “new style” ESA claim will be fast tracked. You should provide the DWP with a DS1500 form, available from your specialist nurse, hospital consultant or GP. With a claim for “new style” ESA under special rules you do not have to serve the 13-week assessment phase before being placed in the “support group”. This means that you will receive an additional payment on top of the basic allowance. In addition, under special rules, your claim can continue beyond 12 months.

Can I claim ESA if I am self employed?

If you are self employed, below state retirement age and are unable to work due to your Mesothelioma then you can claim ESA as long as you have paid the correct level of National Insurance contributions. If you have not paid the relevant contributions then you may qualify for Universal Credit depending upon your household income and savings.
