Benefits and government lump sum compensation advice and support available to people diagnosed with Mesothelioma

If you have been given a diagnosis of Mesothelioma there are welfare benefits that you may be able to claim along with government lump sum compensation. Even if you have a high household income or savings you are likely to be entitled to compensation and multiple benefits.

People diagnosed with Mesothelioma are entitled, on average, to around £270 per week in welfare benefits in addition to an average government lump sum compensation payment of £16,096.

Please don't be put off if you have never claimed benefits before, Citizens Advice Newcastle, in partnership with Mesothelioma UK, offer a free and confidential service to identify which benefits and compensation you can claim and help to complete the necessary paperwork.

Our service also offers advice on how to access local support networks and free expert legal advice.

Advice can be given by phone, video call and email. Home visits are currently suspended. For more information please contact:
